Sino-Japanese Rapprochement: Challenges and Impact

Jing Huang

Dr. Jing Huang will discuss current developments in Sino-Japanese relations and their implications on peace and stability in the Asian-Pacific region. While Prime Minister Abe's high-profile visit to Beijing on October 8 seems to have started rapprochement between the two Asian powers, the fundamental problem still remains unsolved. China's rapid rise and Japan's stagnation in the past 15 years have irreversibly changed the strategic balance in Asia. As a result, for the first time in history there are two great powers existing side by side in Asia. How Beijing and Tokyo handle the challenges in their bilateral relations will surely exert an enormous impact on regional peace and prosperity, in which the U.S. has a high stake. Join us for Dr. Huang's discussion of trilateral relations among the China, Japan, and the U.S.

Dr. Jing Huang is a Senior Fellow in Foreign Policy Studies at the Brookings Institution and an expert on China, U.S.-China relations, and Asia-Pacific security. Dr. Huang is the author of Factionalism in Chinese Communist Politics and is currently working on two book manuscripts, Civil-Military Relations in China: A Long March Toward Institutionalization and Inseparable Separation: a Study in China-Taiwan Relations. Before joining Brookings, he was an associate professor of political science and co-director of the Asian Studies Program at Utah State University, Shorenstein Fellow at the Asia/Pacific Research Center at Stanford University, and Fulbright Professor in Hong Kong. Dr. Huang received his Ph.D. from Harvard University.
